THIS IS NATIONAL DENTAL HEALTH WEEK

February 2 through 8 is the 16th annual National Children's Dental Health Week. As part of the observance, the Bethel Citizen, in cooperation with the dental profession presents this information you should know concerning dental health.

Scientists are beginning to ferme the possibility of developing a vaccine which could make teeth decay a thing of the past. They are presently getting closer to the discovery of what causes dental decay, that most common of man's chronic diseases.

It has been discovered, through intensive research, that, in certain forms of animals, tooth decay is a transmissible disease, that it will not occur in a germ-free atmosphere and that in rodents at least it is caused by bacteria of the streptococcus family.

This is a major advance in understanding the ultimate causation of tooth decay but the information cannot yet be interpreted in relation to man. Hundreds, perhaps thousands, of new studies will have to be undertaken before scientists will know just what it is that makes human teeth decay. While dental researchers are working toward that day in the distant future, it is possible to take immediate steps today to combat the mounting decay problem.

Nearly five per cent of Americans have been attacked by dental decay or are now afflicted with the disease. It has been estimated that Americans have in the neighborhood of 700 million carious cavities—an average of nearly four teeth.

The longer a decaying tooth is ignored, the worse the condition becomes. It will not heal itself. If decay is allowed to run rampant, extensive treatment will be required, perhaps tooth will be lost and will need to be replaced with bridges or dentures. Regular dental care is by far the best defense against "decay" an individual can have.

Still another important preventive measure is fluoridation of the community water supply. More than 40 million persons in the United States, including the President and his family, are drinking fluoridated water. Many studies have shown that individuals who drink fluoridated water from birth have up to 60 percent less tooth decay, as compared to those in the same age bracket born in cities as well as among people.

The "to eat" and other diseases of life lie to the future. Nutrients are now available that can help Americans to have better dental health. Considerably reducing the teeth to decay after eating, early and regular dental treatments.

and a diet low in sweets.

It is worth remembering that a visit to the dentist may not only lengthen the life of a tooth—it may lengthen your life.

When the dentist examines your mouth, he is looking for more than just decayed teeth. He is concerned with the general aspect of your oral tissues and your entire well-being. Part of his examination covers any suspicious lesions, any abnormal changes in the bone and oral structure patterns and other symptoms of disorders.

Children, as a rule, are not as susceptible to the many serious oral disorders as are adults, but early development of good dental habits and visiting the dental regularly will help ensure early discovery of a disease when it can be treated before serious complications set in.

One major disorder your dentist is on the alert for is cancer. Oral cancer has a high rate of spreading with a low rate of survival. Eighty percent (80%) of patients with neglected or untreated oral cancer die within 18 months after discovery. Therefore, early detection of oral cancer is essential for survival.

A new smear technique has been developed which is painless, simple, but accurate and can be performed by any dental practitioner. The method involves taking smear samples usually with a spatula-like instrument, from the suspected area of the patient's mouth and examining the cells to determine if they are malignant.

Oral cancer is not as prevalent as cancer of the uterus, breast, colon and prostate, but oral cancer does have a lower five-year survival rate, and the number of oral cancer patients is increasing each year.

In routine x-ray examinations, dentists have also discovered persons suffering from extremely fatal systemic disorders. These x-rays show any abnormal change in the bone and oral structure pattern. Such changes could mean that the patient is suffering from a serious thyroid condition or Paget's disease. The dentist would recommend that the patient have an immediate complete physical examination.

The American people may well be eating their way toward diabetes. It is known that, for teeth decay to occur, fermentable carbohydrates, such as sugar, must be present in the diet. It is also known that the annual per capita consumption of sugar in the United States has increased almost ten-fold in the last 125 years.

Studies investigating the possibility of tooth decay with the addition of sweets. Americans have compensated the problem by almost elimination of all fibrous, coarse foods which give taste control to the chewing process and which also serve to help clean the tooth surfaces. Highly refined, soft foods, carbohydrates, readily become impacted between the teeth and are more difficult to remove by brushing.

As for professional care, a child should make his first visit to the dentist when he has all 20 of his first teeth, normally between two and three years of age.

With today's diet of sweets and easy-to-eat foods, more diligent home and professional care is necessary of good dental health to be maintained. If the care is not observed, then in the future we can expect more than the present estimate in the United States of 97 million persons with tooth decay, 23 million with periodontal (gum) disease.

case and 21 million with no teeth at all.

A study conducted by the American Dental Association revealed that a majority of the adult dental patients who were surveyed believed that loss of teeth and the wearing of dentures are inevitable. And yet permanent teeth are meant to be just that—PERMANENT. But it is not difficult to understand how such ideas about them came into existence. When more than half of the population over 45 years of age is wearing dentures, it would seem reasonable to many children that their permanent teeth is not too bright.

Loss of teeth is not inevitable and to think otherwise and give up dental care for the expectation of dentures is like letting an injured arm become gangrenous because an artificial arm can be substituted. Artificial teeth cannot be expected to be as efficient as natural teeth.

If a generation of children and their parents can be made aware of, and convinced of, the vital importance of positive dental health as well as early and regular dental care, knowledge and professional skill can maintain oral tissues in a state of health and function throughout life. We can save the teeth we have, and the teeth our children will have, if we take care—home, professional and community.

Early and regular dental care is a standard recommendation of the dental profession. But how soon is "early" and how often is "regular"?

In a national survey, the American Dental Association found that dental patients under four years of age had an average of three teeth needing fillings. The highest incidence of decay occurred among those aged 15 to 19, who had an average of five teeth needing fillings, and this is not counting those who seldom, if ever, see a dentist. It was also revealed that 80 percent of the dental patients under that age of 15 who were surveyed needed fillings, while about 61 percent of those over 15 needed fillings.

Children are highly susceptible to dental decay, as this and other surveys have shown. This is due to a variety of reasons: Snacks between meals, excessive amount of sweets, improper and infrequent toothbrushing and lack of regular professional care. Home care is quite simple. The teeth of those who eat sweet snacks frequently during the day are subjected to almost continuous acid attacks. Therefore, sweets should be kept at a minimum. Brushing immediately after eating will help to remove the sugar before it is converted into acid. When toothbrushing is impossible, the mouth should at least be rinsed with clear water.

As for professional care, a child should make his first visit to the dentist when he has all 20 of his first teeth, normally between two and three years of age.

With today's diet of sweets and easy-to-eat foods, more diligent home and professional care is necessary of good dental health to be maintained. If the care is not observed, then in the future we can expect more than the present estimate in the United States of 97 million persons with tooth decay, 23 million with periodontal (gum) disease.

During that visit, he may need no more than a thorough examination, including x-rays, and cleaning. However, some pre-school children have cavities that require immediate treatment. The child should visit the dentist as often as he recommends for the particular child. Contrary to common belief, the first teeth are very important, for they set the growth pattern for the permanent teeth to follow.

Thus by starting early, when a child is two or two and one-half, by continuing regular care, and by making use of such preventive measures as fluoridation, you can insure a bright future for your child's dental and general physical health.

One of the best ways we in this community can help to insure our children's dental health is through fluoridation. Fluoridation combined with other preventive health measures, can lead to stronger, healthier children and eventually to a healthier America. Forty-four million people in the U.S. enjoy the benefits of fluoridation in 2,200 communities, but what of the other 40 million children? About 7 million persons live in communities where nature has fluoridated the water to the proper level. The only difference between this natural fluoridation and the measure we are discussing for our community is that man controls the level of fluorides to make sure that maximum benefits are received, economically and safely. We are not adding a "foreign" mineral to our water sources, we are simply bringing the content level of this mineral up so that we may take full advantage of its usefulness.

Fluoridation remains the safest, most effective (up to 67% reduction) and most economical method of combatting dental decay that we have today. It is such an easy way to do "so much for so many for so little".

CAR BUSINESS EXPENSE DEDUCTIONS SIMPLIFIED

A new simplified method for computing deductions for automobile business expenses is now available to self-employed individuals and employees. It was announced today by District Director of Internal Revenue, Whitney L. Wheeler.

Director Wheeler said the new procedure eliminates much detailed recordkeeping for individuals who deduct automobile costs, is retroactive to January 1, 1963 and can be used on returns filed for 1963.

The method permits taxpayers to use a standard mileage rate of 10 cents a mile for the first 15,000 business miles driven, and 7 cents a mile for the excess over 15,000 miles.

Under the old method, detailed records of gas and oil expenses, repairs, license tags, insurance and depreciation had to be kept on cars used for business travel. These costs had to be prorated between business and non-business use. The new method requires only a speedometer reading for all deductible business travel. Parking fees and tolls are deductible in addition to the standard rate.

He said that when a person drives two cars for business, the standard mileage rate should be applied to the total business mileage of both automobiles. He noted that under this simplified method when a business automobile is replaced during the year, the taxpayer merely totals the business miles of both automobiles.

The simplified method of figuring auto expense deductions is not available to operators of a fleet of automobiles, Mr. Wheeler said. It also will not apply for operators of vehicles for hire or for those businessmen who do not use a straight-line method of depreciation. Use of the standard mileage rate deduction is optional. Taxpayers may choose to use it one year and not another.

Gould Has 7-3 RecordBASKETBALL RECORD

With only four games remaining on a 14-game schedule, Coach Joe Hillier has produced a record of 7 wins against 3 losses. This is one of the best records in many years. The big four of the starting line-up have been Les Stevens, 191 points; Paul Imhof, 140; Dave Brewster, 99; and Dale Stevens, 98.

These men have played consistently well most of the season, and are the main reason for Gould's success thus far. The fifth man has been the big problem for Coach Hillier who has worked with Dave Kibbe, Don LaDieu, Paul Knight, and Gordon Golby in that spot. All were inexperienced in varsity competition at the start of the season. Dave Kibbe has shown greatest possibilities with his shooting, rebounding and teamwork. Paul Knight also shows considerable improvement and should be heard from in the future.

Over this period, Gould has scored 623 points to the opponents 612 or an average per game of 62.3-61.2. The victories include two each over Bucksfield and Mechanic Falls and one triumph over Bridgton, Gorham, N. H., and Levitt Institute.

The defeats came from Levitt, Mexico, and St. Peter's of Berlin, N. H.

Other squad members who have seen limited service are Dave Wells, Tim Ramage, Tom Day, and Mike Chretien.

The four games in February not included in this summary are at Gorham, N. H., at Bridgton this Friday, and Mexico here on Tuesday, the 11th. The final game will be at Old Orchard on the 14th.
